PLEASE READ

WOLF&RITA strongly disagrees with early sales and other reduced-price selling strategies. Although we understand that every company has its own sales and marketing strategies, we as a brand have a strict sales policy at the core of our brand's ethics and philosophy.

When one of our retailers makes early sales, it affects all our other retailers, even if just because online shopping is now a global practice and soon costumers start searching and, in our opinion, get used to, buying only at reduced prices. This affects everybody and creates a trade market where clients expect to buy only at reduced prices.

At WOLF&RITA we make a big effort to produce locally, ethically and to respect everyone involved in the production chain. Our standard price reflects this effort to keep a high work ethics and contributes to create a fair market for everyone, not only retailers, but also other brands and in the end, our customers.

We strongly believe that discounts should only happen in the sales period. Early discounts will affect especially all the smaller retailers who are unable to sell their stock at standard price, forcing them to also reduce their prices, damaging everyone's business in this and in future seasons.

We ask every retailer to comply with our sales strategy. We should unite and act together to boost sales, not the opposite. It is not enough trying to look good by selling organic, ethically manufactured or Oeko-Tex certified products and neglecting the production chain from the cotton plant picker to the shop owner. If we only focus on getting rid of the stock at any cost, i.e. at low prices, then we are showing disrespect for the product and for everyone involved in its production.

We must respect and value the product. We must work together to educate the consumers. We must make a difference. Buy less but buy well.

Please help us make a better world.
